Nautilus, Inc.'s new Explore the World app is also available on the IC4 bike and 810 treadmill, allowing users to experience virtual courses and stunning trails – from the Irish countryside to the beaches of Australia – that automatically adjust to their speed.

The app, which is available November 15, features numerous real-world maps with high-definition video and new routes added regularly. Explore the World also syncs seamlessly with popular fitness tracking apps including UA Record®, MapMyRun®, MapMyRide®, Strava®, Apple Health and Google Fit™.

Both machines offer Bluetooth® data streaming, so users can also connect to popular third-party apps – allowing them to ride or run with their favorite trainers from Peloton; or interact, train and compete against others on Zwift®.

"The Schwinn brand has a long legacy of combining fun and fitness, keeping consumers motivated from the comfort and convenience of their home," said Jim Barr, CEO for Nautilus, Inc. "The Schwinn IC4 bike and 810 treadmill reinforce our
